This demonstration will underscore the significance of wearable robots in various construction-related applications, featuring two types of exoskeletons: upper-arm support and grip-based support exoskeletons. Participants will have the opportunity to observe and learn how to evaluate the impact of these exoskeletons using wearable physiological sensors. Furthermore, the event will showcase how unmanned ground vehicles can contribute to enhancing safety inspections.