

This demonstration will underscore the significance of wearable robots in various construction-related applications, featuring three types of exoskeletons: upper-arm support, lower-back support, and grip-based support exoskeletons. Participants will have the opportunity to observe and learn how to evaluate the impact of these exoskeletons using wearable physiological sensors.